Whatever you do, don't make major decisions about your major, your courses, or even your roommates during one of these blue periods. Things always look better in the morning.

You'll make a lot of new friends. Continue to be yourself. Don't strike a pose or play the role of someone you're not. Select your friends with the same care and patience you have always used. Believe it or not, your college friendships will be among the most satisfying and enduring relationship in your life. It's always exciting to discover how wonderfully diverse (多样化的) college relationships can be.

You'll also be on your own, your own boss (more or less) 24 hours a day. Enjoy your new-found freedom. Sleep in until the afternoon on a light class day. Explore the local town or suburb with one or two of your new friends. Remember, though, with freedoms comes responsibility. Just find your own style.

Directions: The following is a list about college freshman fears below. After reading it, you are required to complete the statements that follow the questions (No. 56 to No. 60). You should write your answers in no more than 3 words on the line correspondingly.

Common College Freshman Fears

1. I don't know anyone there, and I'll have problems meeting new people and making friends.

One important thing to remember is that almost everyone there is new, and virtually no one knows anyone else. Even the friendliest first-year college students know a small handful of folks, at most, before arriving on campus. Since everyone is looking to meet other people (especially during orientation and your first week), take a deep breath and introduce yourself. And just in case that doesn't work, there are lots of other ways to meet new people on campus.

2. I don't know how I'll balance so many things.

Time management is one of the biggest challenges for college students. By learning some important time management skills, however, you can stay on top of your game and learn how to handle a very demanding schedule while still having fun.

3. I'm nervous about being on my own for the first time.

Good! You should be nervous; being on your own, especially for the first time, is hard. But something inside of you knows you are ready or you wouldn't have wanted to go to college in the first place. Sure, you'll make mistakes along the way, but you're ready to head off on your own. And if not, there are plenty of people and support mechanisms on a college campus to help you out.

4. I don't think I can handle all of the stress.

College is a very stressful place, but being in a stressful situation and being stressed are very different things. Managing college stress takes some practice, but is definitely manageable.

56. What should you remember when you have problems meeting new people and making friends?

One important thing to remember is that almost everyone there _____.

57. What's a big challenge for college students?

_____ is one of the biggest challenges for college students.

58. Why are you nervous as a freshman in college?

I'm nervous about being _____ for the first time.
